Dr. rer. nat. Stefan E Harzen, of Jupiter, FL has been included in the pages of Adventurous Dreams, Adventurous Lives, with 120 other outstanding individuals, representing a Who's Who of international exploration, relating those indelible moments in their youth when the dreams that launched their remarkable lives were born. As they recount the turning points on the way to fulfilling those dreams, which often meant confronting enormous physical, emotional or other obstacles, we learn how incredibly inspirational their lives are.

Other explorers included in the project are Meave and Louise Leakey, Capt. Joel S. Fogel, Buzz Aldrin, Robert Ballard, balloonists Bertrand Piccard and Brian Jones, Sir Ranulph Fiennes, "Lucy" discoverer Don Johanson, the Ra's Capt. Norman Baker, George Bass, Eugenie Clark, Richard Fisher, Trieste's Don Walsh, and Nobel Laureate Charles H. Townes.

A member of The Explorers Club since 2001, Dr. Harzen started his career in the mid 1980s. He was among the first Europeans to study wild dolphins and since his home country Germany provided few opportunities to pursue his dream of becoming a marine explorer, he chose Portugal as his new home. He co-authored and published the first book on dolphins in both a Portuguese and English edition.

Dr. Harzen is a man whose passion and enthusiasm are contagious and inspiring. A scientist with a vision of mankind's future and its needs. He continues to study dolphins, is the host of a weekly radio show promoting science, conservation and sustainability, and explores new ways for doing well by doing good with businesses and community leaders. Together with his wife Barbara, he has been working on a new generation of maps that many expect will change how we see the world. He is well known for his work as a photographer and widely regarded a man of culture and knowledge. A Renaissance Man.

Jason Schoonover, collector and editor of Adventurous Dreams, Adventurous Lives, was elected a Fellow of The Explorers Club in 1986 and currently makes his home in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, and Bangkok, Thailand.
